

Makerspace 101

October 26, 2016

8:30 a.m. – 3:30 p.m. (CDT)

Workshop #027-17

GRREC Office and Training Facility • 230 Technology Way • Bowling Green • 42101

It seems like everyone in education is talking about Makerspaces, but how can one be used to truly transform student learning? If you're interested in effectively incorporating a Makerspace into your library, school or classroom, please join us for Makerspace 101: An introduction to the powerful world of making. Learn how you can create accessible learning opportunities for all students, and foster growth mindsets as you engage minds, hands and hearts in the creative problem-solving process.

In this training, teachers will learn the following:

- Engage in workshop-style Thinker Lab demonstrations aligned to Pre-K through high school content areas
- Understand how students make their learning visible as they construct knowledge
- Discover ways to embed meaningful formative and summative assessments
- Discern the difference between entertainment vs. engagement
- Learn how to effectively implement student-centered Genius Hour
